NSF DUE Seeks Input on the Future of Undergraduate Education in STEM

The Division of Undergraduate Education (DUE) of the National Science Foundation (NSF) seeks to gather thoughts on the future of STEM undergraduate education through an online survey. The responses are confidential, voluntary, and will only be analyzed and reported in aggregate. DUE will use the information for planning a symposium to examine the status of undergraduate STEM education and to look ahead. This online survey has been cleared by the US Office of Management and Budget. CUR is sharing the survey in response to a request from the NSF and neither endorses nor is part of the NSF research project. LINK TO THE SURVEY
